

Figure 14.1 An illustration of fan out in a processor hierarchy. Lower levels must have the most parallelism because each higher level handles fewer packets than the previous level.