Figure 11.2 An illustration of the performance and overall cost of three main network technologies. Software-based systems that have low cost have low performance; ASIC designs that have high performance have high cost for design and change; network processor designs occupy the middle.