Figure 11.1 Conceptual organization of a third generation network system with an embedded processor plus ASIC† hardware on each interface card. A switching fabric provides the fast data path between interfaces. An interface can handle most of layers 1 through 4, leaving the central CPU free to run applications.